Timex has unveiled its latest GPS-ready watch that is actually pleasing on the eyes, known as the Ironman Global Trainer. You will get features such as real-time speed, pace and distance thanks to its built-in SiRFStar III module within, alongside being able to withstand being underwater up to 50 meters deep. A customizable display will let you view all the relevant performance data, while compiled reports can be viewed over your computer as well. The Ironman Global Trainer GPS watch will also play nice with the Timex heart rate and bike sensors as well as third-party power meters thanks to ANT+ wireless technology. Shipping commences this May for a yet unannounced price.
